25X1D0a 2. CSS believes [REDACTED] will provide the basis for a CIWR - Part III article on the development and significance of the Irkutsk-Tayshet-Lake Baikal triangle (including Ulan Ude). Such an article, running 10-15 pages in draft form would cover projected future developments and present importance (based, to a large extent, on the large hydroelectric power resources of the Angara River) of certain of such economic sectors as: electric power, construction, coal, agriculture and forestry, aircraft factories, oil refineries, aluminum and other non-ferrous industries, machine building, electronics, chemicals, and railway development.

25X1D0a 3. Branches are requested to submit any comments regarding organization and content to CSS via their Division Current Support Representatives and to review developments in the area so that the article can be completed with a minimum of effort [REDACTED] 25X1D0a
